Claims 1 and 2

The invention described in claims 1 and 2 does not involve an inventive step in the light of documents 1, 2, and 3. Document 1 discloses an invention of an ultrasound probe constituted using a flexible substrate on which are provided signal lines for obtaining signals transmitted and received from a plurality of ultrasound oscillators, said signal lines being provided at a specified angle relative to the longitudinal direction of the ultrasound oscillators, wherein the flexible substrate is wound in a spiral form. Further, a technique wherein a flexible substrate having cutouts is used to constitute signal lines for obtaining signals transmitted and received from a plurality of ultrasound oscillators is a known technique in the technical field of ultrasound probes (for examples, see documents 2 and 3). Moreover, document 2 discloses a feature wherein such flexible substrates having cutouts are bundled (see especially fig. 4). Thus, applying the features disclosed in documents 2 and 3 to the invention disclosed in document 1 would be obvious to a person skilled in the art.

Claims 4, 6, and 7

The invention described in claims 4, 6, and 7 does not involve an inventive step in the light of documents 1 to 5. The provision of a shielding material around a signal line is a known technique in the technical field of ultrasound probes (for examples, see documents 4 and 5). Thus, adding the above known technique to an invention derived from documents 1 to 3 would be obvious to a person skilled in the art.

Claim 9

The invention described in claim 9 does not involve an inventive step in the light of documents 1 to 3 and 6. Document 6 discloses a flexible substrate for obtaining a signal from an ultrasound oscillator, wherein a signal line is provided on a first surface and a ground line is provided on a second surface. Thus, applying the feature disclosed in document 6 to an invention derived from documents 1 to 3 would be obvious to a person skilled in the art.

Claims 3, 5, and 8

The invention described in claims 3, 5, and 8 is not disclosed in any of the documents cited in the international search report, nor would it be obvious to a person skilled in the art.
